STORY & TRIGGS, in presenting this New and Enlarged Edition of their Book of Designs, have pleasure in offering the following hints and suggestions to their numerous Customers, upon the Art of Tasteful Furnishing.

Entrance Hall and Staircase.

It is essential that the Entrance Hall of every house—be it a cottage or a mansion—should be furnished in a manner compatible with the rest of the home. First impressions are here engendered in the mind of every visitor, and in no small measure are the tastefulness and domestic ability of the hostess estimated by the appearance of the hall. In Bungalows and many small country residences, the hall is really an important apartment—a living room, in fact, where the family dine and sit; and the staircase, which erstwhile was usually hidden from ordinary ken, is, in a Bungalow, made an interesting and pleasing feature at one end of the Dining Hall. The furnishing and decorating of such a hall suggests many schemes of treatment. Fumigated oak woodwork with Japanese leather-paper on the walls, or cream enamelled woodwork with warm yellow damask wall paper, are agreeable and fashionable modes of decoration.

The ordinary narrow halls, however, which are unfortunately still so prevalent, present a much more difficult problem. Here we always advise the placing of as little moveable furniture as possible. A hat-rack with ample pegs, and a bevelled mirror, or a simple hatstand, with, perhaps, a narrow bench or a couple of chairs, are adequate; whilst in London houses the wall decorations should be as light as possible. Dark colours—such as rich terra-cotta, sage greens, &c.—are too frequently employed in halls already dull and cramped, where lighter and warmer colourings would have given cheerfulness, and apparently increased the area.

The Counting House.

Economy of space and a judicious regard to lighting form the chief characteristics of good office furnishing. In these matters we have had almost unparalleled experience, for many of the most important City counting-houses have been fitted and completely appointed by us. At all times we are prepared to submit schemes, plans, and estimates for office fixtures, partitions, counters, bookcases, desks, lockers, etc., etc, without charge

The Library.

Those of our clients who devote themselves to study or literary work, will find us ever attentive to the requirements of their especial apartment. The arrangement of bookshelves, and the contrivance of convenient bureaux, drawing desks, and curio cabinets, form an interesting branch of our business; and it has already been our privilege to furnish not a few of the most comfortable and replete studies and libraries extant in this country. The decorations of the library, the draping and disposition of its furniture, either for the mansion or the middle-class villa, constantly engages our earnest attention; and the several new designs of bookcases, writing tables, reading chairs, etc., contained in this Catalogue will afford but a faint idea of the extensive stock of such furniture that we always have on view at our Showrooms.

The Dining Room.

The treatment of this important room almost entirely depends upon the class of house about to be furnished. In large establishments the Dining-room is essentially an apartment in which meals are served, and therefore, in such cases, convenient furniture and a somewhat imposing type of decoration are required. In middle-class homes, however, the Dining-room is often the most frequented room in the house, and thus it deserves our primal consideration. The decoration should be generous, though not obtrusive, and the furniture should be unquestionably comfortable. The stately twelve chairs and grand buffet of the mansion must here give place to a convenient sideboard, substantial small chairs, and two or more luxurious lounges in either tapestry, leather, or saddle-bag coverings. The walls may be covered with a rich paper filling and a gold or rich-coloured leather-paper frieze above. The furniture may be walnut, oak, or mahogany, and the fitted woodwork should be painted cream, or a tone two shades darker than the wall paper. The ceiling, too, ought to be covered with a paper of an unobtrusive pattern, or else with some delicate relief decorations—new patterns of which we are constantly introducing. A square of carpet, with an ornamental border, should be placed in the centre of the room, or, if a parquet floor is permissible, it is as well to throw down two or three Oriental rugs. Where it is desired to furnish a Dining-room in an inexpensive manner, it is always advisable to have a small square of carpet, and to have the outside edges of the flooring stained a rich old oak colour. It will be seen, in this Catalogue, that we have given considerable attention to economic dining-room furniture; and in most of our new designs we have endeavoured to combine the greatest amount of convenience with the least possible cost. In the very important matter of upholstery, too, we come before the public with every confidence, for all our upholstery work is done upon our own premises, and under our direct personal supervision.

The Drawing Room and Boudoir.

These are the lady's rooms par excellence. Here, indeed, we expect to find a reflex of the hostess' taste. S. & T., therefore, make it an invariable rule to individualise the various Drawing-rooms entrusted to their care; and in all cases they sedulously invite the co-operation of their clients. The many designs of chairs, cabinets, settees, fancy tables, étagères, screens, writing tables, etc., etc., contained in this Catalogue afford endless suggestions for dainty Drawing-room furnishings, and the constant change of decorative schemes displayed in our Showrooms present a vast selection of fashionable motifs. Fanciful furnishings are in vogue at the present time, and almost every epoch of art is now being requisitioned by us. The "Rococo" or Louis XV. style is decidedly the most popular, and it has naturally called for much consideration at our hands of late. S. & T., however, whilst they cater for prevailing tastes, make it a practice to advocate a more chaste and simple mode, not only on account of æsthetic reasons, but because such simple furnishings will be fashionable long after the more extreme "Rococo" shall have been abandoned by tasteful folk. It is impossible to particularise any style of decoration for "my lady's" room. Delicate flower-bedecked wall paper, with window hangings and chair coverings to match, are now combined with gold or white enamelled cornices and cream woodwork; whilst inlaid or carved mahogany cabinets, with pretty latticed glass doors, and graceful little chairs and tables are especially favoured in the Boudoir and Drawing Room. Examples of these dainty items are shown in plenty among the following pages.

The Bedroom.

The Bedroom is always an important apartment, inasmuch as its arrangement concerns, not only the satisfaction of our taste, but also the influencing and maintaining of our health. The asphyxia—inviting furniture of the last generation—has, happily, long since been abandoned; but even at the present time it is necessary that customers should entrust the appointing of their Bedrooms to firms of great experience in hygienic furnishing. Cleanly, compact, and graceful woodwork, with easily moveable carpets and simple bed and window hangings, are always advocated by S. & T. A redundancy of drapery, badly designed furniture, and fitted carpets, are invariable dust-traps, and in these days of improved sanitation such insidious enemies of good health cannot be too carefully guarded against. The Bedroom Suites which we have illustrated in this Catalogue have all been selected from our stock. They comprise samples in several styles of art, and are produced in almost any wood, and to almost any price. Fitted furniture, now so frequently and so wisely employed for Bedrooms, receives our continual attention; but, as the varying size and arrangement of each separate room demand special attention, we make it a rule to prepare original designs for each room that we treat with fitments. The decorations of the Bedroom should always be fresh, cheerful, and light; and the appointing should always be done with a view to making it not merely a sleeping room, but also a private sitting-room as well. Where space permits, there should be included in every Bedroom at least one easy chair and a small writing table.

BEDSTEADS.—STORY & TRIGGS' Bedstead Department will be found to comprise all the leading designs and makes, with the latest sanitary improvements.

BEDDING.—STORY & TRIGGS beg to call the attention of their patrons to the great importance of this department of health, and to assure them that S. & T. give it their most careful supervision, manufacturing on their own premises Bedding of the very best materials.
